Marici Zuvic receives Anchor Award

On October 22, 2011, Marici Zuvic, founder and president of Zuvic, Carr and Associates, Inc., was awarded the prestigious Anchor Award by the University of Hartford's Alumni Association. This award honors alumni "who have distinguished themselves by achieving the highest level of professional accomplishments and who possess absolute standards of integrity and character to positively reflect and enhance the prestige of The University of Hartford."

The seventh annual Anchor Award Ceremony was held at the University's Harry Jack Grey Center. Each college within the University chooses an award recipient, and Ms. Zuvic was selected by her alma mater, the College of Engineering, Technology and Architecture.

Ms. Zuvic began her engineering career in her native country of Chile. She came to Connecticut 27 years ago to study civil engineering at the University of Hartford. She worked for the Connecticut Department of Transportation for more than 20 years on various projects, ranging from highway design to bridge safety and evaluation. In 1988 Ms. Zuvic pursued her dream of starting her own company. In 2009 she returned to Zuvic, Carr and Associates, Inc., and under her stewardship the company has grown significantly and is currently involved in many landmark projects.

"I am extremely honored to have been chosen by the University of Hartford Alumni Association as one of the 2011 Anchor Award recipients," said Ms. Zuvic. "I have worked hard to make Zuvic, Carr and Associates, Inc. the thriving company that it is today, and I would not have been able to accomplish this without my background at the University of Hartford."

Marici Zuvic with Hisham Alnajjar, Ph.D., Professor and Associate Dean of the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering.
